Carolee Duckworth

Dr. Carolee Duckworth has worked with thousands of career changers over the past 30 years, including displaced industrial workers, homemakers reentering the workforce, retraining adults, technology students, and 55-and-over individuals preparing for new careers. Her current focus is on assisting retiring Baby Boomers (of which she is one) with their next great career change.

Her publishing company, New Cabady Press, specializes in books that make a significant and life-changing difference. Future books include a series of unique travel books based on her very own “Great Trips” adventures. An idea person, Carolee lives her life as though all things are possible. The way she lives is her strongest statement to others that “the sky’s the limit”—or is there any limit after all?

Marie Langworthy

In her prime as an educator and administrator, Dr. Marie Langworthy derived her greatest satisfaction in identifying underachieving adults, empowering them, turning them loose, and watching them grow professionally. Now in her 21st century life, Marie has “shifted gears” too, creating her new niche teaching 55+ Boomers to use basic technology tools, and supervising new potential teachers. Also, she has launched her own web-based business, Super Writing Services, (www.superwritingservices.com), where she exercises her passion to “write it the right way to say what you mean.”

In addition, as editor-in-chief for New Cabady Press, she specializes in the grueling ‘spit and polish’ process of word-smithing the next potential “great American literary piece”... or future NY Times best seller. She admits that she’s still “a work in progress” – trying to determine what she’ll do if and when she ever grows up and grows old. In the meantime, she continues to welcome the adventure of each new day.
